

PeTA Mail Campaign – Urge Government Agency to Stop Testing on Baby Animals – emails received from interested public

Sample email received:

Subject: Please Stop Testing Soy Infant Formula on Animals

May 4, 2010

Ms. Linda S. Birnbaum

Dear Ms. Birnbaum,

I respectfully request that you put an end to the animal experiments to test soy infant formula announced by the National Toxicology Program (NTP) in its draft brief on March 16.

I was horrified to learn that my tax dollars are supporting continued animal experiments to test soy infant formula when it has been used safely to feed millions of infants for 60 years. The effects on reproductive development and function observed in rats and mice dosed with genistein are evidently irrelevant to humans because of differences between species. New animal experiments will do nothing to make soy infant formula safer for humans, and the use of more animals cannot be justified. A more sensible approach would be to collect health information from the millions of people who were given soy infant formula as babies.

Please put an end to this waste of tax dollars and animal lives.

Sincerely,